

I am writing to complain about the episode of Fear Factor that aired on public television on 2/9/03. In that episode, during the stunt on the raised beams, the men on the ground mooned the contestants. Although the network was "kind" enough to blur this out, this is just another example of what our networks (and society) have sunk to in what they will air on television. When will you do something about this? Is this what our children really need to see and think is acceptable???

Start fining these networks and stations heavily so that they will think before they air things. Why don't you do this? Why don't you enforce the rules that you have? START DOING IT!
